

THE NEW TIMES,

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

Under this title, it is proposed to issue in the City of New-York, about the first of January next, a new monthly periodical, for the discussion of the important social, philosophical, and religious questions, which especially agitate the present epoch. The New Times will bring to the discussion of these questions, the most Catholic spirit, and the light of positive principles. It will aim to maintain in the social sphere, the essential and permanent interests of man; in philosophy to discover and set forth the laws of order, which govern the spiritual as well as the natural universe; and in religion, to assert and illustrate the distinctive hope of christianity, which is the universal establishment of fraternal relations among men, and the dominion of the divine justice upon the earth.

The NEW TIMES will be edited by HENRY JAMES. Among the constant contributors, the Editor is permitted to name GEORGE RIPLEY, PARKE GODWIN, C. A. DANA, J. J. G. WILKINSON, of London, G. H. CALVERT, Rev. B. F. BARRETT, HUGH DOHERTY, of Paris, JOHN S. DWIGHT, besides a number of other writers.

A regular correspondence in London and Paris will form a feature in the Magazine. Occasional translations from the solid and light literature of foreign languages will also give it variety and interest.

The NEW TIMES will be published promptly on the first of every month, $3 00 per annum, payable always in advance. Each number will contain 64 octavo pages, printed in the best style on handsome paper. Communications and orders may be addressed to the Editor, No. 9 Spruce-street, New-York.

My dear Sir:

You will confer a very great favour upon me if you will send me something for the first No. of the New Times. It will turn out I fear a rather sombre No. unless you can be induced to do this. A paper on Music, or any other branch of art, or on art universally, or in short any thing you have on hand, will be most acceptable.
Dana says I must compel you to give us something. Please consider that done, and believe me at the same time very truly

Yours H. James

P.S. Let us have whatever you may favour us with by the Let Dear or thereabouts. I would gladly offer if I were able some carnal inducement to you combined with my request, but I am sure you will consider it reward enough to have given its first wings to so virtuous and enterprising.
